Mac Os X 10.0 Cheetah Iso Download

ive been unable to install it on a partition, i tried ncurses as a GUI and im haveing the same issue, i have tried refluxnet but im just not sure what to do as to what to do next, my options are limited as to the kind of installation that I can make on my disk, as I wish to use both linux and mac OS X as my primary, and secondary operating systems, and my question is this, can I use the data files from a mac iso to burn a CD to install mac OS X from or do I need to have a clean installation? Please give me any advice on how to accomplish this task as to what can I do to install mac OS X using a usb installer from a CD, as I have seen on some other threads that the cd-rom is an issue with macs, the idea of installing the OS from a usb stick is an excellent idea, and i wish to try it, its just that if you have to burn a CD on mac and then create a usb key on a PC to install mac OS X on, this seems like it could become a nightmare. Hi, I'm new to the forum and not very experienced on this site, so forgive me if I make any mistakes in my posts. I have a CD-R that has Mac OS 9 on it. The CD-R is in the format of a DVD-5, and this is what I want to use as the installer for Mac OS X. The CD-R has a maximum capacity of 4.7 GB, so I can't use it for the whole OS, just like a traditional DVD-5. I used Reflector Pro on it and I could extract the data but when I tried to burn it, I discovered that it wasn't an iso file, but a rar file. So, what can I do to use this CD-R as a DVD-5? Is there some way to get a iso file or something like that? Is there a way to use a DVD-5 as an iso? Is it possible to do this? I have a problem similar to dosshell's, I want to install Mac OS X 10.0 on my old iMac. When I try to boot the CD (using iMac 7,2 CD with EFI booting, 4.2 GHz Intel Core 2 Duo, 4 GB 1333 MHz DDR2 SDRAM (PC2-6400)), 82157476af
